To whom it may concern

I do not think it is fair that we in the south have to pay more for our energy than those up north. Please review your Transmission Pricing Methodology to create a more fair approach. I believe that it is unfair that charges to create better infrastructure further north should not be put on to people who live in the far south, when the highest population numbers (and obviously demand also) are obviously up there too. I understand that this email is not full of facts and figures like some. It is only one person's opinion. But from what I have read I just had to submit based on how unfair all this seems
